Suggested Improvement / Room for Development	Through visiting the park, children appreciated the appearance and characteristics of various plants in nature and learned that many different colours could be found in nature.	At the “Hong Kong Toy Story” exhibition, children got to view rare antique toys. The exhibition had an area where children could try various nostalgic toys which made them feel curious and fun.	Through appreciating dance performances, live interactions, and games, children were encouraged to try imitating the movements of jellyfish, moving their bodies to the rhythm of music, triggering their physical instincts, and inspiring their creativity and imagination.

Suggested Improvement / Room for Development	Through the activity, children could learn about the 200-year-old Hakka village houses and related culture, appreciate the characteristics of the buildings, and understand the customs of the Hakka people. The activity could enhance children’s understanding of Chinese culture.				The activity enhanced children’s awareness of fire prevention and allowed them to express gratitude to firemen for their hard work and learn to be grateful.				The arrangement of the activity was smooth, and docents could be arranged in advance to explain the exhibits, so that children could have a deeper understanding of the features of the exhibition halls. As the Science Museum was large and the two-hour visit time was relatively short, increased time is recommended for such visits.
